英商報論中國前途 她在抗日戰爭中取得勝利還需努力贏得和平 Writer Believes Chinese Strength In Adversity Heralds Bright Future

Washington, (USIS)—Army chief of Staff General Omar N. Brâdley told the house is expressed in an article published in the latest issue of the Anglo-Chinese chamber of commerce journal. The writer says: "the economic crisis prevailing in China today must surely be a source of profound worry to all with interests there. Whenever a ray of hope breaks through the dark clouds overhanging far eastern trade it seems to linger only for a fleeting moment and to be quickly dispelled by pessimistic news emonating from China. It would seem to the uninformed observer in Britain that all in China is chaotic. Yet there is an optimistic side. It was admirably expressed by Madame Chiang Kai-Shek when she admirably expressed by Madame Chiang Kai-Shek when she admirably expressed the Women's International club in Nanking last the strength of an individual's—of a peoples character—comes in black moments when the future seems dark. But the strength of an individual's—of a peoples character—comes in the way he fights his way out of a seemingly hopeless depth. It is this struggle against odds which produces human progress. Those of us who have passed through China's crisis when they were at their dismal worst are not dismayed today. As long as we have a deep conviction that gift is fighting on our side we know that we will be stronger for our present difficulties'.
